LITERATURE.

ATLANTIC MONTHLY.

The September Atlantic contains three new chapters of Mr. Howells's new serial story, "Dr. Brown's Practice," which cannot fail to be read with the greatest zest and enjoyment by the multitude who find in Mr.
Howells's story some of the most charming reading which our age affords. A very noteworthy article is that by Mr. E. L. Godkin, "The attempt on the President's Life," which discusses with great thoroughness and ability the motives and object of the assassination, and derives from the fearful act a thoroughly logical and impressive lesson upon the necessity for change in the mode of appointment of officers. It is an article which deserves the widest and most careful reading. John Fiske continues his instructive and engaging series of mythological articles with one entitled "Koschei the Deathless, or the Diffusion of Fairy Tales." The second part of Mary Halleck Foote's story, "In Exile," confirms the exceedingly pleasant impression which the first part made, and proves her to have as great skill in writing as in art. H. H. continues her unusually interesting series of Norway articles with an essay on "The Catrina Saga," which is part story, part essay, and part poetry, all thoroughly delightful. All housekeepers will be interested in the very charming, if possibly Utopian, sketch of "Housekeeping Hereafter," by James V. Sears. J. Brander Matthews, who always writes of theatrical matters with so much intelligence, discusses the "Dramas of the Elder Dumas." Rev. Wm. Chauncy Langdon contributes a paper deserving much attention among Harvard graduates and well-wishers on the "Future of Harvard Divinity School." Dr.
Holmes contributes the Psi Beta Kappa poem which he recently read at Harvard; and Miss Edith M.
Thomas, one of the most promising of the new contributors to the Atlantic, has an attractive poem entitled "Harvest Noon." The remainder of the magazine contains notices, of some or more important new books, an unusually interesting and varied Contributors' Club, and a running discussion of the books of the month.
A thoroughly good number of this standard magazine.—Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Boston.

POPULAR MONTHLY.

The September number is especially noteworthy. The opening article, by George Alfred Townsend, entitled "Days of Gloom in the White House," is timely and interesting, embodying a history of the Presidential mansion, and the most prominent incidents in connection with the attempted assassination of the President. The article is illustrated by sixteen fine engravings. Mr. N.
Robinson contributes an admirable article, "Brighton, the Queen of English Watering Places," with thirteen illustrations. "Movable Homes and Tent Life" treats of the various homes of the true nomad; there are fourteen illustrations. "An Early Visit to Marshfield," "A Russian Home," "A Chapter on Roses," and Mr. Denning's article on "Comets," with its eighteen illustrations, will be read with great interest.
Benedict's serial, "A Late Remorse," is continued, and there are some excellent stories by popular authors; one by Chandos Fulton, "There's Burglars in the House," is extremely humorous. There are sketches, essays, poems, and an abundant miscellaneous replete with interest and valuable information. The number is embellished with a handsome front-ispiece, "He Won't Hurt You," from Heywood Hardy's painting.
Frank Leslie's Publishing House, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL.

Contents of the September number:
"Paul H. Hayne, the Southern Poet," "Imagination as Connected with Science," "Comparative Phenology," "Does Death End All?" "Poetry of Ralph Waldo Emerson," "The Evolution of Homes and Architecture," "Charles J. Guiteau, the Assassin," "A Talk with Our Girls," "The Queer Friends," "How Child-Habits are Formed," "Hygiene of the Eyes," "Molds of Fruits, etc.," "Malaria," "About a Set of Teeth," "Notes in Science and Agriculture," Editorial Items, Answers to Correspondents, Poetry, Personal, Selections, New Books.

DISPENSARY is the costly price we pay for luxuries. All civilized nations suffer from it, more or less, but none so much as the people of the United States. It is here in the new world that the disease has become domesticated; and we, as a people, have it retrained to monopolize its miseries. Let us check its further progress by the use of Tarrant's Seltzer Aperient.
